

Disney
PRINCESS

VOLUME
10

Two Hearts as One

STORYBOOK LIBRARY

Snow White kissed her husband, the Prince. "I'll be back soon," she said. "I will miss you," said the Prince as he waved goodbye.

Snow White sang happily as she headed into the woods. Soon she and the Prince would celebrate their first wedding anniversary! Snow White could hardly believe it.

“Hello! Hello!” she called out to the Seven Dwarfs as they ran from their cottage to greet her. Even Grumpy couldn’t hide his delight!

“I have a special favor to ask you,” said Snow White. “The Prince and I will be celebrating our first anniversary with a royal ball. I would like to make him dinner, but no one at the palace will let me cook!”

“They don’t know what they’re missin’!” Grumpy said.

Snow White smiled. “So I wondered if I could make dinner for him here. And I wanted to give him a special gift—something he could add to his family shield.”

“Grumpy, I love Snow White so much that I want to give her the most precious gift I can find to celebrate our anniversary. I am having a crown made for her, and I would like to find the most beautiful diamond I can to set in the center of it.”

Grumpy puffed up his chest. “I’ll find the most beautiful, most sparkling, most dazzlin’ diamond in the whole mine!”

They agreed to meet later that evening.

Deep in the mine, Doc found his perfect diamond. Even in the dim light of the mine, the diamond sparkled and winked. He hurried off to find the other Dwarfs and a pickax to dig out the precious gem.

Grumpy also rushed into the deepest part of the mine. He turned a corner and found the exact same diamond Doc had found! Grumpy didn't want to smudge it by touching it. He hurried off to find a soft rag to help him as he dug out the diamond.

Dopey whistled a little tune to himself. He, too, had wandered the mine alone, looking for the perfect diamond for Snow White. And there it was—the same diamond Doc and Grumpy had chosen! Carefully, he dislodged the diamond with his pickax, and then he began to chisel away at it.

Doc, Grumpy, and the other Dwarfs hurried back to the perfect diamond. When they got there, they saw Dopey chipping away at it!

“Dopey!” they shouted as they waved their hands.

Dopey looked up. His hammer slipped and hit the diamond. It broke into two pieces!

Far above them at the mine's entrance, the end-of-the-day whistle blew. "It can't be that late already!" said Doc. "What will we do? Snow White will be waiting for us when we get home!"

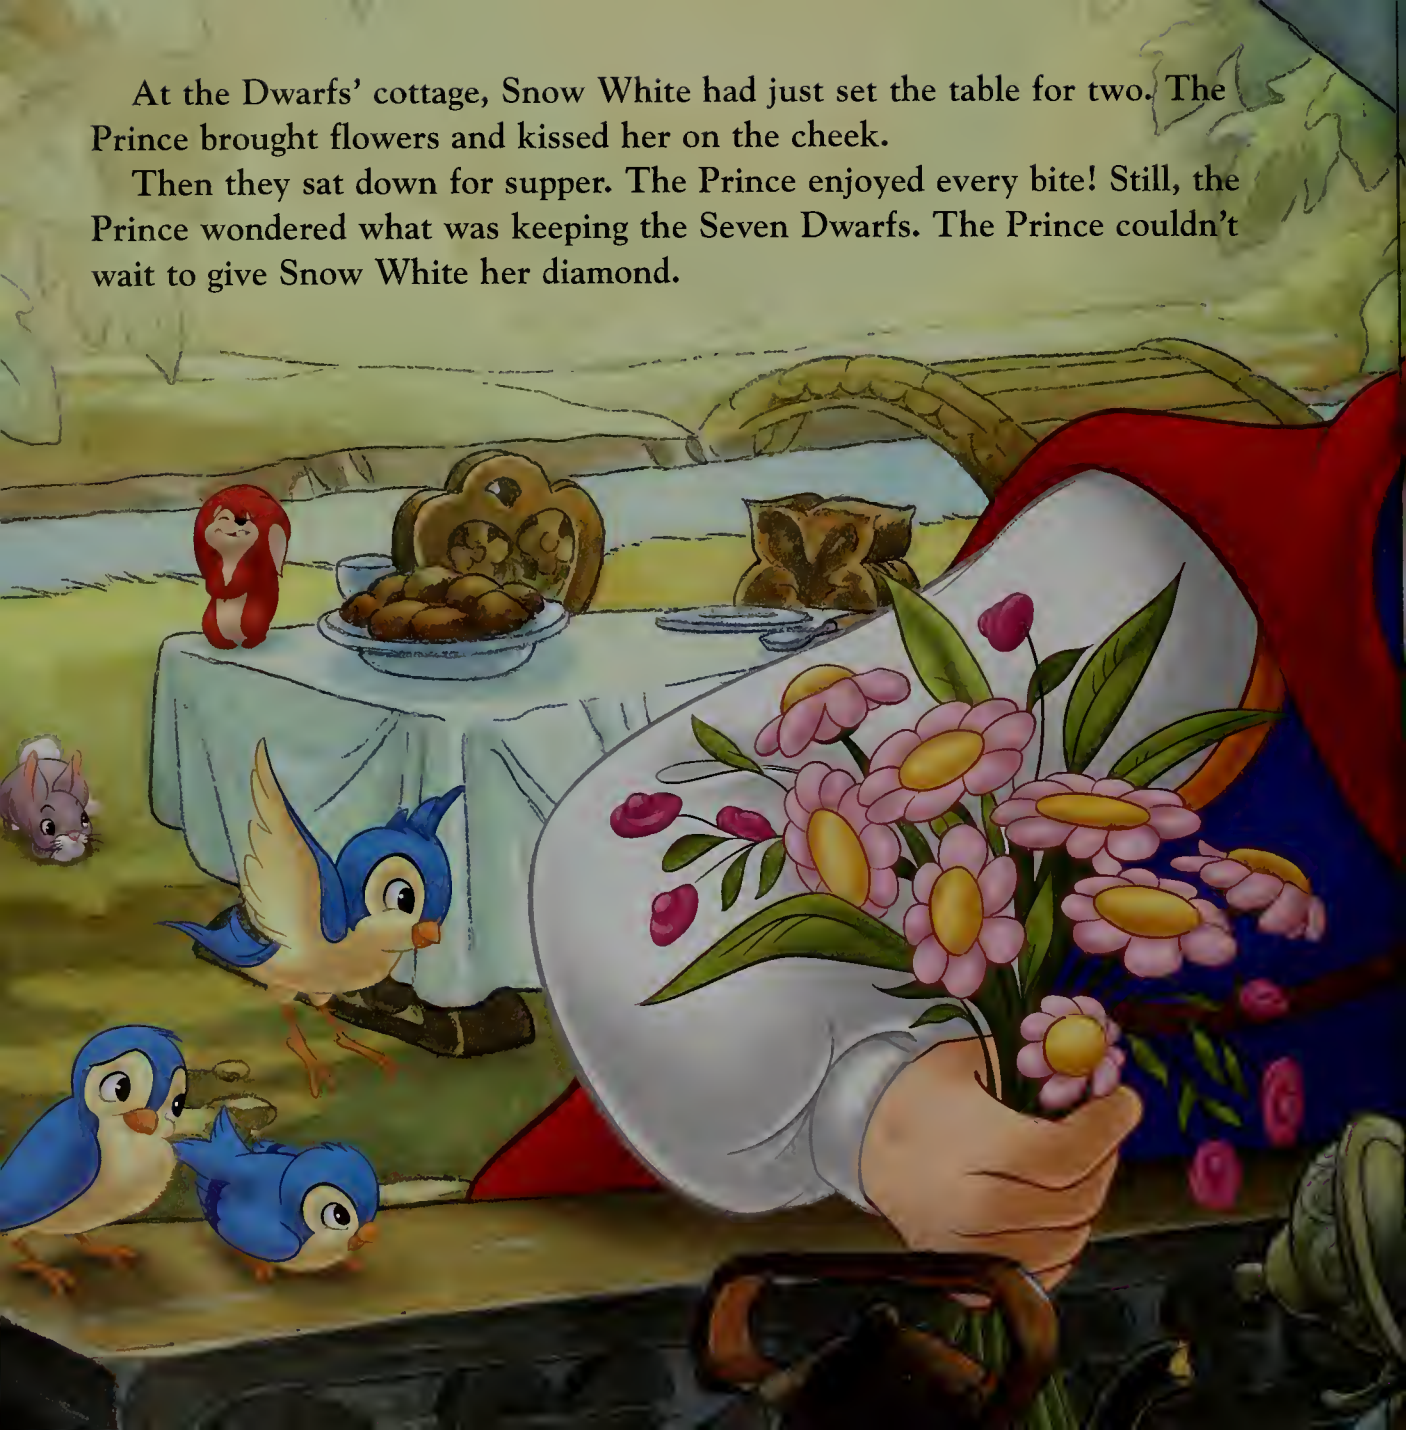

"So will the Prince," said Grumpy.

Doc sighed. "We'll just have to explain."

Grumpy and Doc put their separate halves of the diamond in two different bags. Dopey found some flowering vines to tie the bags shut.

At the Dwarfs' cottage, Snow White had just set the table for two. The Prince brought flowers and kissed her on the cheek.

Then they sat down for supper. The Prince enjoyed every bite! Still, the Prince wondered what was keeping the Seven Dwarfs. The Prince couldn't wait to give Snow White her diamond.

Snow White and the Prince were just finishing their pie when the Dwarfs returned. Snow White smiled at Doc. The Prince smiled at Grumpy. Doc carefully set his bag in front of Snow White, while Grumpy gave his to the Prince.

Snow White and the Prince looked at each other in surprise.

"This is the other part of my present," said Snow White.

The Prince picked up his bag. "We must think alike," he said.

"This is my present for you."

"This is for your crown, my love," said the Prince. He handed Snow White the bag and waited as she opened it. His eyes widened when he saw the broken diamond.

Grumpy crumpled his cap and looked down at his shoes.

"Oh, darling," Snow White said to the Prince as she helped pick up the broken diamond. "How unusual!"

"Yes," said the Prince, disappointed. "Unusual."

“And I have something for your shield.” Snow White beamed as she handed the Prince her bag.

The Prince carefully let the diamond drop into his hand.

Then he squeezed Snow White’s hand. “It’s beautiful, my dear, because it is from you,” he said.

Dopey came over to the table and pointed to Snow White's diamond and the Prince's diamond.

"Yes, they are beautiful, Dopey," said Snow White. She patted his arm.

Dopey shook his head and pointed to each of the pieces again.

"I'm sorry," said the Prince. "I don't understand, Dopey."

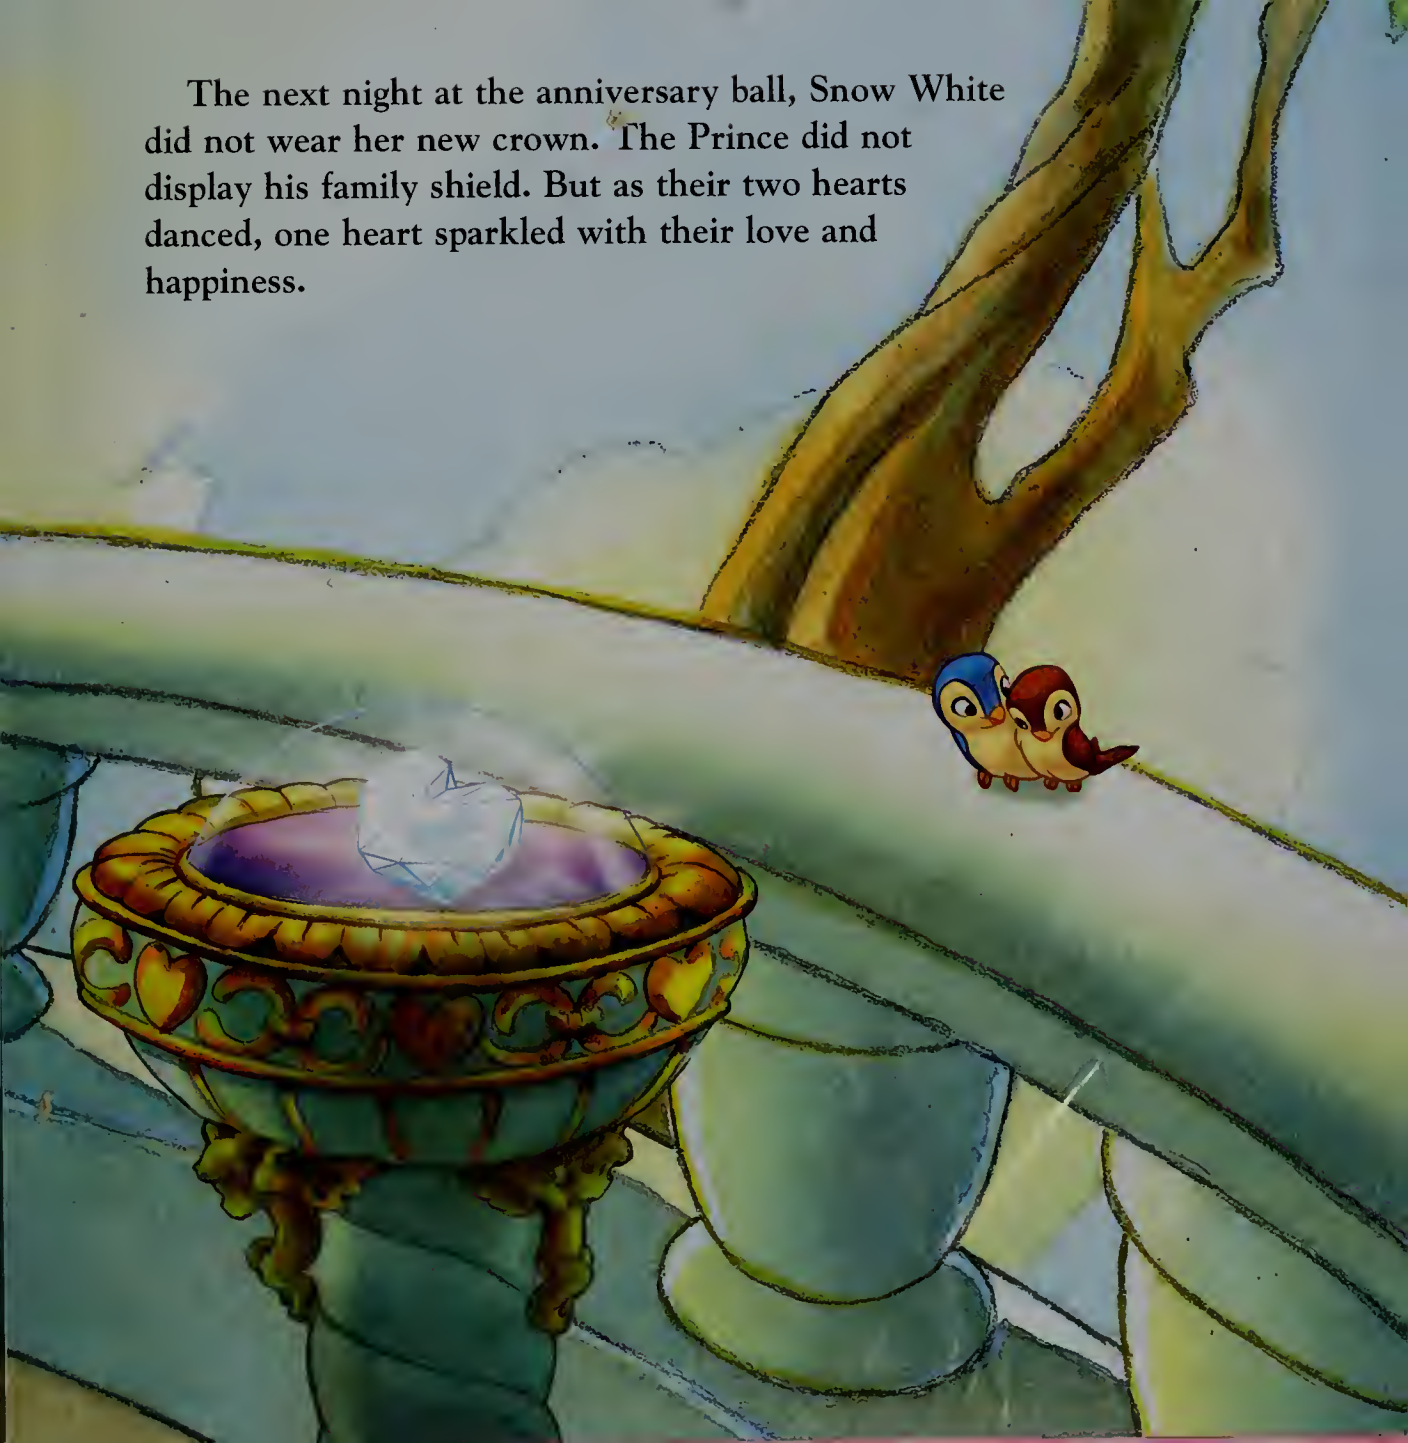

As the Prince and Snow White watched, Dopey joined the two separate pieces into one perfect heart.

The next night at the anniversary ball, Snow White did not wear her new crown. The Prince did not display his family shield. But as their two hearts danced, one heart sparkled with their love and happiness.

Once a princess, always a princess. This Storybook Library will delight parents and children who share a love of storytelling. Relive the magic of Disney's animated film princesses: Cinderella, Ariel, Belle, Snow White, Sleeping Beauty and Jasmine—with all the enchantment, romance, and wonder of dreams that really do come true.

The Dwarfs help Snow White and the Prince find the perfect gifts to exchange on their first wedding anniversary.

Look for more books in the Disney Princess Storybook Library Collection!

Published by Advance Publishers, L.C.

www.advance-publishers.com

Written by Catherine McCafferty

Produced by Judy O Productions, Inc.

Designed by SunDried Penguin

© 2005 Disney Enterprises, Inc.

All Rights Reserved

DISTRIBUTED BY:
GREENBRIER INTERNATIONAL, INC.,
CHESAPEAKE, VA 23320
MADE IN CHINA

ISBN:1-57973-186-4

0 27506 70010 4

951386 94